Holidays in France

Marco

Last June my family and I went to France for our summer holiday. We spent two weeks at a campsite in the south of the country, near Marseilles. There was a beach not too far away but it was very crowded so I spent nearly all my time at the campsite pool, which was much nicer. I met some French kids there and we had a great time together. I really need to work hard on my French though, so that next time it will be easier to talk to people.

Jing

I'd always wanted to visit France, so I was really excited when my parents told me we were going to the city of Caen in the north of the country for our summer holidays last year. There were some lovely beaches not far from the city and we also went to an attractive indoor market, which sold everything from fish to flowers. It was wonderful. However, the best thing we did was a one-day cooking course. I've never cooked anything before and it was really fun!

Tommy

My family always spend our summer holidays in the south of France, and last year we stayed at a campsite on a beach near Arles. I loved swimming in the sea and in the campsite pool. I also enjoyed using my French when we went shopping at the local market. My school friends would be amazed! Because my mum and dad are artists, they wanted to visit a museum about the painter, Van Gogh. Usually I don't like museums, but actually this one was really interesting.

A fantastic business idea

When sisters Caroline and Isabel Bercaw were 11 and 12 years old, bath bombs (coloured balls that you add to your bath water to make it smell nice) suddenly became very popular. Caroline and Isabel often used them, especially after doing sports, and so did their friends. They all thought that the bath bombs made bath-time feel special.

Caroline and Isabel got so interested in bath bombs that they looked online and found some instructions for how to make their own. Their first ones weren't great, but they practised until their bath bombs were perfect. Then they had the clever idea of adding a surprise in the centre of each one, such as a small toy or a piece of jewellery.

When they had a big box of their new bath bombs, they agreed on a price, and then took them to a local market to find out if people wanted to buy them. The girls couldn't believe it when they sold all the bombs in just a few hours.

After that, they began to work hard on their business. They had a lot to learn, and asked for help whenever they needed it. They spoke to their teachers at school, called business owners, and of course talked to their parents. Soon, they were selling their bath bombs in shops all over their home town.

The business continued to grow and is now a big success. The girls think this is because of the little gift inside each bath bomb. This made their bombs exciting and fun to use, especially for young people.

- 14 What do we learn about bath bombs from the first paragraph?
- A how often you should use them
 - B where you can get them
 - C why some people like them
- 15 When Caroline and Isabel began making bath bombs, they
- A didn't enjoy doing it.
 - B weren't very good at it.
 - C couldn't find any instructions.
- 16 What were the girls surprised about at the market?
- A how quickly they sold their bath bombs
 - B how many other people were selling bath bombs
 - C how much money customers were happy to pay for the bath bombs
- 17 What do we learn about Caroline and Isabel in the fourth paragraph?
- A They wanted to find a business partner to work with.
 - B It was difficult for them to get time off school.
 - C They got advice from lots of different people.
- 18 What is the writer doing in the final paragraph?
- A suggesting a way the girls could make their business better
 - B saying what will happen to the business in the future
 - C explaining why the girls' business has done well
